ACCUSE YOUTH OF ATTACKING GIRL

$150,000 Court House Is Burned; Two Killed,
Score Wounded

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 20.—The riot-torn town of Shelbyville settled back today into its usual peaceful ways that were in sharp contrast to yesterday's stormy outbreak which left two dead, almost a score wounded and the once towering court house a mass of blackened ruins.

Burn Court House

E. K. Harris, 22-year-old Negro whose alleged attack on a white school girl precipitated three attempts by a mob to seize him at his trial in circuit court, remained in the storm-proof jail at Nashville, while 600 national guardsmen occupied Shelbyville to prevent a recurrence of the disorders that reached a climax last night with the firing of the $150,000 court house.

The scene had changed entirely. The people talked good naturedly about the militiamen who moved in this morning on orders of Gov. Hill McAlister. Their comrades sent here yesterday in an effort to protect the Negro and avert bloodshed had been targets for jeers and threats after their volleys poured into a mob battling at the court house doors.

Mob Spirit Dies

The guardsmen took things easy. For the most part they loitered around their headquarters in the police station, their military activities limited almost entirely to marching to their meals in a hotel.

Apparently the mob spirit had died and business was brisk in advance of the holiday.

So far no investigation of the trouble had been started. Circuit Judge T. L. Coleman was on the bench while the mob stormed the doors, said he planned a conference with the prosecuting attorney, but the time has not been fixed.

Thief Takes Ashes Of Dead Husband

CINCINNATI, Dec. 20.—Thieves who entered the apartment of Mrs. Helen Ankerson, in nearby Norwood, took two small boxes—one black, the other yellow.

In the other, were the ashes of her dead husband.

Shoe Co. Expands

Goodman Co. of Columbus, and Lancaster, plans production of 1,500 pairs of women's shoes daily. It will employ 200, and have a weekly payroll of $3,000, they said.

Sound Call For Huntsmen For Community Fox Chase

Spring Valley Gun Club Plans Public Hunt Saturday Afternoon in Butler Township

Butler township's hills and dales will echo with the cry of the huntman Saturday afternoon when the Spring Valley Gun club will hold its first public fox chase, with several hundred entrants expected.

"Tally Ho!"—or some such word as this might well be heard if the best custom of the hunt is observed but with the affair being an open event, guns and dogs barred, every man for himself and heaven help the fox, or foxes, if any, words of purely American derivation will probably drown out the traditional alarm.

The Spring Valley Gun club is reputed to have members from Columbiana, Stark, Mahoning and other counties, and it is announced, they have arranged Saturday's event purely as a sports proposition.

The huntsmen are to meet at 1 p. m. at McCann's schoolhouse in Butler township and there will receive instructions from the "master of the hunt."

According to preliminary plans, the hunters will deploy into a large ring, the size to be governed by the number of entrants, and they will proceed then to scour the brush for their quarry, converging upon a common point.

Guns are barred because, promoters of the event point out, the huntsmen, rather than the fox, would likely be in greater danger. Clubs will be used. He who bags a fox will keep the animal, if any are bagged.

Several farms have been leased in Butler township by the Gun club, it is announced, and this tract, about three miles southeast of North Georgetown, will be the scene of the chase.

TAX ON STREET JOB IS ARGUED

Should S. Ellsworth Property Be Assessed? Director Asks

Should residents of South Ellsworth ave., along the stretch to be resurfaced by the city, be assessed for their proportionate share of the improvement?

This problem was argued between Service Director Charles T. Kennedy and members of city council last night.

If the city resurfaces this stretch of highway without cost to property owners, what will other property owners who were assessed for improvements near their homes have to say? This was the question Kennedy asked.

Small Job, Says Krauss

Councilman Samuel Krauss expressed the opinion that inasmuch as the job is only a small one, the assessment angle was not important enough to consider.

Kennedy pointed out that cold weather at present is holding up the project. He said that it would be impossible to roll out the material satisfactorily under the present temperature. He also pointed out that Perry township had done an excellent job of improvement on the section of the road in its jurisdiction and that the city, consequently, must perform its part of the work under conditions which will permit it to match the township job.

The service director also parried a few shafts from council members concerning the scattering of ashes at street intersections during slippery days, for the safety of motorists.

No Money Available

The service department is doing everything possible to this end, Kennedy said, but explained that men with work without money and there is little, if any, money left in the fund which pays for this kind of work.

As a result, the finance committee was instructed to check on resources available for street maintenance.

City Engineer F. S. Barckhoff reported favorably on preparations for the storm water sewer project which, he said, will be given early attention by the FERA.

Legislation to pay a claim of $780 to W. E. Alton of Leopold st., and a claim of $650 to Leopold st., was enacted by the council. Both asked damages as a result of auto mishaps, one because his car struck an uncovered manhole, the other as a result of a collision with a fire truck.

Columbiana Club Host To Kiwanians At District Meet

COLUMBIANA, Dec. 20.—The Kiwanis clubs of the 10th district were guests of the Columbiana club Tuesday evening in the Knights of Pythias hall. There were 123 present, including Kiwanians from Steubenville, East Liverpool, Salem, Lisbon, East Palestine and Leetonia.

Three former lieutenant governors were present: Fred Owen, East Palestine; Russell Heddleston, East Liverpool; and Ira Melinger, Leetonia; also three present lieutenant governors: Robert Cox, Canton, of the 8th district; O. D. Metzler, Youngstown, of the 9th district; and Clark Marshall, Leetonia, 10th district.

Fred Parker, Chicago, secretary of Kiwanis International, was the guest of honor. He said that Kiwanis was a "going forward" organization regardless of present conditions. So far this year 15 new clubs have been organized and club activities for helpfulness have increased.

Mr. Parker was introduced by Lieutenant Governor Marshall Dr. H. F. Campbell was a local guest. Richard Dryden sang "On the Road to Mandalay," accompanied by Miss Ellen Myers. The "Smith brothers," 8 and 13 years old, of New Brighton, entertained with musical selections.

Perry Grange Has Christmas Party

There were 60 members present at the annual Christmas party of Perry grange, held last evening in the grange hall. A treat for the children was a feature of the evening. The roll call response was "Remembrance of My First Christmas."

An interesting program was opened by a song, "Holy Night," by the entire assembly. Other numbers were: Reading, "Get Thee Behind Me Satan," Mrs. Joseph Driscoll; selections by Leetonia High school orchestra, Overture, "Jolly Bandits," "Minuet" and "Salute To The Flag," reading, "Uncle Simm's Christmas Sermon," George Hawkins; recitation, "Christmas Bells," Janet Whinery; reading, "Poor Papa at Christmas Time," Roland Bush; recitation, Russell Wilde; playlet, "Had We Known," Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Huston.

One member was obligated in the first and second degrees.

The juvenile grange was organized last night by Mrs. H. E. Williams of the Lisbon grange, with a charter membership of 36.

On Jan. 1, officers for 1935 will be installed by Merick Fallow of Mile Branch grange. At that time a covered dinner will be served.

Hardware Stores Boast Full Stocks

A visit to the hardware stores of the city will reveal that Santa Claus has left no stone unturned in this particular line of trade to satisfy every customer.

Gleason-Meyers, the Salem Hardware and Car's hardware are well stocked with staple and seasonal offerings.

There are toys of varied descriptions to delight the heart of any youngster and it is doubtful whether the "oldsters" can find better stocked stores, to meet their more utilitarian needs, anywhere.

On Monday morning the Walken brothers will have their annual moving picture treat for the youngsters at the Grand theater. The hours are from 10 to 12.

Approximately 550 invitations are being sent out to children between the ages of 8 and 12, inclusive, for these two big events and the chances are that there will be 550 invitations accepted on the spot.

Following a meeting of the body last night, officials of the Charities announced today that 361 vouchers, of $1 each, have been issued to 170 families.

TOWNSHIPS MUST PREPARE PLANS

Locations Being Decided Upon In Various Sub-Divisions

LISBON, Dec. 20.—The sum of $108,000 is available for the construction of township schools in Columbiana county when, and if, the various sub-divisions involved determine locations and other essential details.

This is the announcement today of W. E. Roberts, county superintendent of schools, on his return here after a conference with FERA and school authorities in Columbus.

Divide Costs

Labor would be provided by the FERA and the materials supplied by the state department of education.

The total sum is based on plans and estimates prepared for the various proposed buildings.

It is possible to have several centralized high schools erected in the county, also several six-room buildings, providing, however, the different school districts desire such school facilities.

St. Clair township is practically assured of a new six-room school to be erected at Calcutta.

One four-room building for Middleton township is expected to be erected at Neiley, as parents of children attending the Neiley, Mt. Carmel and Achur schools favor the erection of a new school at Neiley rather than at Rogers, according to information received by the county board.

850 Sign Petition

Knox township is anxious to obtain a centralized school, and a petition showing 850 names has been filed with the county board of education seeking such improvement.

Madison township is anxious to have a new four-room school, and this may be located in the vicinity of Williamsport, a part of the Crawford farm being viewed with favor as a site for this improvement. This, it is held, is about the center of the township.

St. Clair township is assured of a six-room building at Calcutta.

END OF A LONG FUSE

Reports of a border dispute between Italian and Ethiopian troops in Africa will not rouse more than half-hearted interest in the United States. In Rome, in Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, and in Geneva, to which Ethiopia has appealed and whose facilities have been spurned by Premier Mussolini, the dispute is important. It means that the end of a long, slow fuse has been lighted. If allowed to burn, it may set off a dangerous bomb.

Why is there danger? To reach an answer one must go behind the visible incident to the half visible jealousies, ambitions and fears which motivate nations. It is necessary first to refresh geographical memory with a glance at the divisions of the vast territory lying southward of Egypt in Africa. First, there is Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, spread on both sides of the upper Nile. To the east and toward the coast is Ethiopia. Between Ethiopia and the coast is Italian Somaliland, strategically located to cut Ethiopia off from external communication.

Commerce, of course, is the logical motive to seek out. Some believe the ambitious traders of Japan are at the bottom of the clash, which otherwise would have had no importance. Italy fears Japan is trying to get control of Ethiopia. Ethiopia, on the other hand, seems to suspect Italy of the same motive. Fear prompted the shots which were fired last Dec. 5. Fear, pride, hatred and ambition very likely will cause more shots to be fired. Potentially involved are all the nations with possessions on the border of Ethiopia — Great Britain, France and Italy.

Premier Mussolini has chosen to demand an apology from Ethiopia. It is his way of asserting Italy's intention to protect itself arbitrarily from whatever dangers are known and guessed by those with true information. Ethiopia, which has appealed to the League of Nations for help, unintentionally has placed the league in the middle. In 1923, Geneva tried to settle a similar dispute between Italy and Greece, but was spurned. Italy proceeded to carry out its plans, which, in that case, called for occupation of the island of Corfu. Probably a few more days will reveal what Italy or perhaps Japan intends to do in Ethiopia.

LARGER, OF COURSE

George H. Dern, secretary of war, has done the usual thing by asking for more manpower in his annual report to the President of the United States. Secretary Dern, however, does not beat around the bush. He requests slightly more than a 50 per cent increase in officers. This would make an army of 14,000 officers and 160,000 men, as compared with 12,000 and 115,000.

The United States would be much stronger in the field thereafter. Mr. Dern asks for 800 new airplanes over a three-year period, to give the army air corps 2,320 serviceable planes. Last winter's experience with airmail, he explains, wouldn't have been so tragic had not the air corps been weakened by inadequate appropriations.

Secretary Dern wants two other things for the army—enough money to complete a housing program at home and abroad, and a new war department building in Washington. He points out that war department activities at present are going on in 17 different buildings, whereas they should be under one roof.

The country will ponder these things as carefully as a parent reads his offspring's letter to Santa Claus. There probably will be no direct refusals, but it won't be surprising to hear next year that Mr. Dern still wants the majority of the things he asked for this year, but didn't get. After all, one can't expect to get everything at once, hard as Secretary Dern and all his predecessors have tried.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Dec. 20—Harry Richman bounded into town again the hit of a musical show. In reality Richman is no longer the juvenile singer of romantic songs. One suspects the hair dresser is neatly concealing a powder of white at the temples. Yet he continues his illusion.

More than any other performer of his era he has escaped the winking eye of time. Not that he is old but every vaudeville enthusiast remembers him playing the piano accompaniment for Mae West's sly chants at least 20 years ago. On the stage today he looks not much older.

Even in the intimate closeup of the night club he remains about the most formidable attraction. One of his big assets is his constant fidelity to fashion. Like the gossamer surmounted figures of the clothing ad, he is the fashion plate the average clod longs to be.

Plus this, he has amazing energy and a light airpeggio that blends with strutting, mugging and capering. The fervor he excites in putting over a song is a study in psychology. It almost lifts those sedate ladies, usually afflicted with nervous Victorianism, out of their chairs.

Among the radicals, both tepid and torrid, Union Square is "Red Alley." The police, taking cue from the unbridled license permitted dissenters around London's Marble Arch, allow the soap box orators unusual latitude of expression. Lambasting the government, and working into a lather over the omissions of capitalism provide a safety valve. The steam let off is harmless enough and if checked might cause more serious explosions. There is friendliness about the Union Square cohorts. They strive especially to make the shabby stranger feel a comradeship—more so than in most areas.

The private mansions of Helen Gould, Cornelius Vanderbilt and Samuel Untermyer are about the only ones left on the avenue between 42nd and 59th. In 20 years the solid residential front has almost completely vanished. It is conceded Rockefeller Center saved the great thoroughfare from a shabbiness it does not deserve. With this architectural triumph, its continued opulence is assured for this generation and next.

A hole-in-the-wall on 8th avenue is packed solidly these days from the lure of a wondrous window card reading: "Salt pork, fried grits, Philadelphia scrapple."

Libby Holman returned to the stage as a Spanish senorita with laced bodice and veil. Her entrance was a curtsy and kneel of supplication. There was a dove-like throbbing in her throat and her slumberous eyes seemed luminous with a vague terror. How would the audience react to the not-forgotten orgy of headlines? Charles Winniger, star and veteran of innumerable first nights, stood valiantly by, steadying her with smiles and clipped whispers of encouragement. The applause was generous, but not overwhelming.

Jay Brennan, considered by the stage wise as foremost of straight men in cross fire patter, has been in almost constant search for a partner since the passing of his rowdy team-mate, Bert Savoy 10 years ago. Yet each "find" failed to click. The handicap is heightened by memory of the vivid performances Savoy gave. His catchline "You must come over!" became a part of the slang. Savoy's meter was a jovial commonness that rarely got beyond burlesque. A female impersonator who portrayed the hard-bitten lady of the sidewalks. But made it a classic.

In one of the bier stobes of Yorktown during the excitement of a football game via the radio recently there came timidly through the door a dear little jet-bonneted and deaf grandmother of the old German section. She nodded, beamed and groped for the usual nickel. Five by the clock and just right for the afternoon's afternoon! Whispered the barkeep to the excited gridiron fans: "She come at 11 o'clock all through prohibition. I never charge her more than 10 cents." While the radio brayed she sat sipping. At the game's tense moment she arose, smoothed her dress, bowed and smirked on one and all. But at the threshold, she turned and in that metallic low pitch of the aurally touched said: "Pretty music, wasn't it?"

Thingumabobs: Col. Creighton Webb is considered the town's most accomplished dandy past 50. Fannie Hurst is surrounded in her study by 8 different pets. Jascha Heifetz is dizzy at recitals until he begins to play. Ona Munson has three pianos in her drawing room. Fred Stone, now perplexed homes a razor. Hamish McLaurin, novelist and globe trotter, is one of the most expert amateur musicians. Erskine Gwynne, long the most notable playboy of Paris, now sips nothing stronger than tea with lemon.

THE STARS SAY

For Friday, December 21

The lunar transits for this day point to difficult and exciting circumstances unless a rigid control of tongue and temper be exercised. This adverse state of affairs may find its strongest reactions in the domain of the social, domestic or affectional relations. However, the mind may be calm and collected, in this way wielding a modifying influence in moments of aggravation and stress.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of high pressure conditions which may be best handled by rigid self-control and calm and collected demeanor. The mental condition will assist to this wise attitude, being conservative and cautious. Particularly is discretion enjoined in social, domestic or romantic affiliations.

A child born on this day may be high strung and temperamental, but at the same time may have a studious and profound mind and be affectionate and home loving.

Chronic Bronchitis Not Incurable

I CAN THINK of no other common ailment that is more likely to be neglected than chronic bronchitis. It afflicts young and old, especially those persons beyond middle age. The disease is often associated with bronchial asthma and other disturbances of the upper respiratory tract.

Unfortunately, neglect of this disturbance leads to lowered resistance of the body and increases the susceptibility to bronchial pneumonia, and other serious disorders of the lungs. The bronchitis places an additional strain and burden upon the heart. Many unexpected deaths from heart disease can be attributed to prolonged and neglected bronchitis.

Bronchitis, as its name implies, is an inflammation of the lining of the bronchial tubes. When it is sudden in onset and lasts for a short time, we speak of it as "acute bronchitis." But when it persists for a long period and continues to irritate the lining of the bronchi or tubes of the lungs, it is known as "chronic bronchitis."

Strain on the Heart

The sufferer from this condition experiences difficulty in breathing, perhaps with a peculiar wheezing in the chest. Sometimes the wheezing is so pronounced that it can be heard several feet away. In addition there is a constant hacking cough and shortness of breath upon the slightest exertion. The victim is easily fatigued and generally complains of poor health. Spasmodic attacks of coughing often accompany bronchitis. The face becomes reddish-purple and there is a choking sensation. Relief is obtained only after large amounts of mucus have been brought up. During such attacks hot drinks, such as tea and lemon, milk, or plain hot water are helpful. The heat relaxes the spasm and by relieving the cough lessens the strain on the heart.

No doubt you have often heard sufferers from chronic bronchitis state that there is no need of going to a physician. They regard the condition hopeless. This is decidedly the wrong attitude to take, for when no attempt is made to correct the disease, serious complications may occur.

Seek Underlying Cause

Every effort must be made to determine the underlying source of the original infection. In most instances this can be traced to a center of infection somewhere in the body, perhaps remote from the lungs. Diseased teeth, tonsils, adenoids, nasal sinuses, gall bladder, appendix or other organs of the body may be the underlying cause of the bronchitis. These local infections must be eradicated before the irritation in the lungs can be cured.

In rare instances chronic bronchitis may be due to some abnormality, such as a tumor growth of the lungs. This can be determined accurately by X-ray examination of the chest. Al suffers from chronic bronchitis might well submit to this procedure. It is probable that some cases of chronic bronchitis are improperly dealt with because of inadequate knowledge of the real condition of the lungs.

My advice to every sufferer from chronic bronchitis is to consult the doctor and whenever possible have an X-ray picture taken of the lungs. Above all, do not neglect this serious handicap to health and long life.

FINE, BLUE-WHITE DIAMONDS in a special holiday offering

It's the year to give a diamond. Why? One look at our sparkling selections—one whisper of their present prices—will tell you! Such gems never grow old, never let the giver be out of mind. Settings are exquisite this season. Let us show you.

FINAL SHOPPING TOUR

LET'S BE on our way, shopping to select that last minute batch of gifts for those who must be pleased and appeased. Not for our choosing are the ordinary perfume or box of writing paper. For these gifts should only be bestowed when we are well aware of the taste of the recipient in these matters.

Many a handsome bottle of perfume has been passed on to the maid because the owner simply hated amber or a flower bouquet. So let's move on to things more practical, such as a chromium, brass or copper book or newspaper rack, designed for the confirmed reader who props up newspaper or book against the water tumbler and is surprised when both collapse. These racks are beautifully designed and are ornamented with a bright rooster. Surely there can be few gifts that should be so appreciated, and which are so modestly priced.

Decorated Bottles
Bathroom bottles can be very trite, however useful they may be. But one shop has these decorated in an extremely clever fashion. The big square bottles with big wide fluted glass tops, are each decorated with useful symbols. There is an eye beautifully painted on the eye lotion bottle, a lovely hand on the bottle for hand lotion, the skin tonic has a face and the mouth wash a beautiful mouth and glistening teeth. A bobbed head marks the hair lotion or tonic and a svelte figure tells us that the bottle contains body friction or alcohol rub. The set of six is most modestly priced and makes a gift that any-

Is it a fire? Or a fight? What's got Min so excited? Whatever it is, good old Andy Gump is flying to the rescue to take the situation in hand—and master it! Don't miss any of the excitement in this swift moving hilarious comic strip—

Father of Six, 64, Revealed as Modern Jekyll-Hyde

"It was my lust for blood that made me do it," says Albert H. Fish, small, mild-looking, 64-year-old father of six children, whose confession of murder cleared up the six-year-old mystery of the disappearance from her New York home of Grace Budd, 10. These camera studies show the quiet, gentlemanly appearing man his neighbors knew. His confession brands him as one of the most maniacal killers since "Jack the Ripper," with a long criminal record. Anonymous letters he wrote the Budd family trapped him.

Orange Sweets Are Coming Into Use Now For Christmas Feasts

NOW IS the time to serve dishes made with orange as a principal ingredient. Not only is it holiday time, but a time that needs all your ingenuity to think up new and original dishes for those who assemble at your table to partake of your hospitality, but the orange is at its best.

Orange Pie

By all means serve the traditional pumpkin and mince pie and the Christmas pudding but why not serve orange pie as well? We guarantee that your guests will enjoy it. Mix one tablespoon of cornstarch with a cup of sugar.

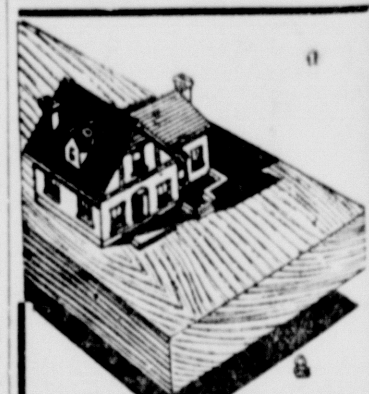

Then add the juice of two oranges and the grated rind of one. Mix well and add the well beaten yolks of two eggs. Cook without boiling till mixture is thick and before removing from flame add a piece of butter the size of a small egg. Pour into a previously baked pie crust and cover the top with the whites of two eggs well beaten and sweetened. Place in oven for a few minutes until the meringue is a light brown.

quarters all over it, setting them in position with a second coat of jelly. Boil three quarters of a pint of milk with the rind of two oranges and strain on to the yolks of two eggs which have been worked with three ounces of sugar, add half ounce gelatin and stir over the flame until thick without boiling. When the mixture is cold but not set, add two tablespoons orange juice, a few drops lemon juice and four tablespoons whipped cream. Pour carefully into the orange lined mold. Set to chill till firm.

Orange cups make a nice sweet, wholesome for the youngsters and palatable for adults. Halve six oranges carefully, remove the pulp, leaving two complete cups of the skins. Make an orange jelly, add a teaspoon fresh lemon juice. When cold, break up with forks and fill each orange cup with the jelly. Sprinkle coconut over each orange cup.

Orange bananas is a nice dish. The ingredients here will yield two servings and it is nice served with thin graham or whole wheat bread and butter. Peel one orange, remove all pith. Cut into very thin slices and lay half in the bottom of a deep plate. Peel two bananas and cut into thin rounds over the top of the orange slices. Put remaining orange slices over the banana rounds. Squeeze juice of half a lemon over all. Then about a tablespoon of powdered sugar over all. Let remain for about two hours before serving.

EASTHAM, Mass.—Believed to be more than 300 years old, an Indian battleaxe was found while dragging for scallops here. According to Cleon Crowell, an authority on Indian archaeology, the well-preserved weapon was one of the finest specimens of Indian handiwork. It was recovered from the water a mile from the first Pilgrim encounter with the Indians. The axe weighed about three pounds, measured 16 inches in circumference at the shoulder and had an eight-inch blade.

WELL-DRESSED LITTLE GIRLS

WEAR JUMPERS!

Pattern 2093

This little girl in curls and a diminutive jumper dress could very easily be an example of "what the well-dressed young lady" is wearing this year. For her little frock is cut along chic bolero lines and has snappy pleats in front to make it comfortably full to romp in. The cunning guimpes—which comes with the pattern—has tiny puffed sleeves which always look so charming on chubby young arms. Brown or blue serge or wool-crepe, with challis or any cotton material for the blouse would be an attractive choice of fabrics. Be sure to make several little guimpes to keep sister fresh looking all through the week.

Pattern 2093 is available in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 6 takes 1 1/2 yards 36 inch fabric and 1 yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Fight Over Liquor Continues

Old-time saloon bar.

Liquor store in Silver Springs, Md.

Rep. John J. O'Connor. The arrival of the birthdays of two important pieces of legislation on the liquor question—Dec. 5, for repeal, and Jan. 16, for prohibition—finds the opposing forces on the liquor problem still fighting. Undaunted by repeal, the anti-liquor groups are battling for more stringent laws and return to prohibition. Repeal supporters are striving to rid the nation of bootlegging, an evil carried over from prohibition days. Revelation of statistics showing a heavy illicit liquor trade since the advent of repeal has led Rep. John J. O'Connor of New York, a leader in the repeal drive, to predict that congress would investigate "this risky trust," believed responsible for bootlegging activities.

Schmidt Warned by Alumnus Of State's "Queer Breed"

John Fullen, Editor of University Monthly, Flays
Fair Weather Football Rooters

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Dec. 20.—Through the haze of hurrahing over Ohio State university's football fortune a foghorn sounded today with John B. Fullen, secretary of the Ohio State University association, yanking the rope in a friendly caution to the new Buck Coach Francis A. Schmidt.

Editor of the Ohio State university alumni monthly, Fullen discussed Ohio State's "hot-spot" football situation in a lengthy open letter, declaring "the real truth is that they're a queer breed of cats around here, and you might just as well know it."

"They hang on tenaciously to so-called losing coaches if they admire them, and fire 'winning coaches' if they don't," he wrote.

Refers to Administration

The "they" he referred to, Fullen explained, were "the people who really run the university, administration and faculty members who for years have put the thinking and hard work into this institution to make it the great educational enterprise it is today."

Fullen went on "you're the toast of Ohio right now and even one of the wonder men of the country in this your first season in the Big Ten and at Ohio State x x x you are in the embrace of John Q. Public right now and how sweet must be the sensation thereof! Drink that joyous cup to the last drop, but don't let it intoxicate you."

Recalls Willaman's Record

Fullen cited the public clamor raised over Schmidt's first year record and admonished "don't let all this deceive you." He recalled other teams in recent years which lost only one game and remarked "yet the man who coached those teams is no longer here."

"All they hope now to do is ride a winner. They never have and never will turn a real, constructive hand for Ohio State x x x Their utmost for alma-mater is a sore throat when we win and a sore head when we lose."

"Don't let them get you boy," Fullen pleaded.

A Few Hints, Herewith, On Savory Stuffings For the Yule Turkey

THIS IS the time when we start to give thought to nice plump turkeys and the woman who is buying one for the first time is rather apt to be a little fazed when it comes to judging a turkey. For you can't tell a turkey's age by his teeth, because he hasn't any. But just the same there are ways. When it comes to Mr. Turkey, he is as young as he feels—we mean, as he feels when you rub your hand over the flesh and find it soft and pliable, which tells you that the bird is a youngster.

Old birds feel hard-fleshed to the touch. Put your hand under his wings and feel the muscles. If they break easily, the bird will be tender. If they resist pressure you can be certain that he is pretty set in his ways, and not so young as he used to be. Then take a look at the feet. Up to a year old, the feet are black. Turkeys up to the three-year mark have feet of a healthy, pinkish hue. After that the feet will take on a dull, grayish hue and you can be sure that the turkey has covered considerable mileage around the farm.

Sausage Stuffing

After the bird is chosen, the next item of importance is the stuffing. Turkey tastes twice as good when its flavor is enhanced by a savory, spicy stuffing, whether it be of the moist or of the dry variety. Some use oysters and others pin their hopes on sage. An unusual stuffing which brings out all the good turkey flavor by contrast is made with sausage and cracker crumbs, as a base. Serve it with plenty of good rich giblet gravy, and even if this be your first Christmas dinner, your success will be certain and your husband will be doubly proud of you.

Combine and mix well one pound of sausage meat, ten soda crackers that have been crumbled to make one and a half cups of crumbs, two eggs, one teaspoon salt and two cups chopped celery, plus two and a half cups water. Will make six cups of stuffing.

Aprirot Stuffing for Goose

If it isn't turkey you crave, but chicken, goose or duck, then there are other grand fillings. To make a delectable aprirot stuffing for goose, stir thirty crumbled graham crackers and one tablespoon sugar into two cups mashed, cooked, diced aprirots. Makes four and one-half cups.

That chicken will taste like banquet meats with an orange stuffing. Mix together two crumbled plain crackers, one cup water, quarter cup orange juice, one teaspoon grated orange rind, one teaspoon minced onion, third of a cup melted butter, half a teaspoon poultry seasoning and one teaspoon salt. When preparing to serve, garnish bird with thin orange slices.

Peanut stuffing for duck is something that will add new zest to your holiday meal. Combine twenty crumbled flake butter crackers, one cup shelled peanuts, one cup cream, one teaspoon minced onion, salt and pepper. This will make three cups stuffing.

In 1926 Pennsylvania high schools graduated 13 per cent more girls than boys, while in 1934 four per cent more boys than girls finished these schools.

SUNBURY, Pa.—Sunbury's clergy dug up an old forgotten law enacted in 1903 to stop a walkathon contest which had been underway two weeks at the Island Park Pavilion. The act made it a misdemeanor to promote or participate in an athletic competition for more than 12 hours of a calendar day.

STATE CLOSES 3 LOAN HOUSES

Liquidation Started In Cleveland Associations
Today

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, Dec. 20.—Harry L. Everets, state superintendent of the Building and Loan division of the Ohio Department of Commerce today closed and placed in liquidation three Cleveland Savings and Loans associations. He said four would be closed during the day.

Total assets in the companies were transferred to the state and all further business was prohibited. Notices of the closing were posted on the doors of the companies at the same time that copies were filed in common pleas court.

Three Closed So Far

The companies closed so far are:

The Aetna Savings & Loan association; the Association Savings & Loan association; and the Empire Savings & Loan Co.

"There is no criminality involved," Everets said. State Commerce Director Theodore H. Tangeman in Cleveland today, as the closings were ordered, said the companies were in such "unsound financial shape to prohibit further business."

Tangeman said his department had been investigating the financial conditions of the companies for four months.

Will Act Decently

"We have come to the conclusion," he said, "that it is the duty of the present administration to do the job as decently and with as little destruction as possible and not to ask the new state administration to do it."

The present state department of commerce is willing to take any criticism for we feel it is our peculiar duty to salvage as much as we can from the unsound institutions and save the sound ones."

Cuyahoga county has 75 open and closed building and loan companies with total assets of approximately $102,000,000. Six have been in liquidation for some time.

'Salem Sam' Willaman, Reserve Coach, Speaks At Annual Hi Banquet

Clifford Beck Elected Honorary Captain of Grid Team; Letters Awarded 28 Varsity Players and Six Reserve Members

The person who said football isn't a worthwhile game lacked the authority for which he spoke, and should have attended the annual Salem high school banquet for members of the 1934 team in Memorial building Wednesday night.

The words that "Salem Sam" Willaman, coach at Western Reserve University, put across the speaker's table alone would have sent the speaker to football scurrying to a far corner, but...

Ask the high school gridriders. They're unanimous in the approval of the sport. They broke training regulations, however, last night at the quiet sponsored by C. C. Gibson, president of the Mullins Mfg. Corp.

Turkey Piece de Resistance And did those boys eat! They made the buns fly and tossed 'em about as accurately as they would handle a forward pass. The piece de resistance was roast turkey with all the trimmings, mashed potatoes, navy celery, cranberry sauce, coffee and ice cream.

Meeting shortly before the banquet, the Quaker gridiron warriors elected Clifford Beck, center, honorary captain for the season.

Coach Sam Willaman, "returning home" for the occasion, gave a witty, humorous, but inspiring talk on the intricacies of football. He was introduced by Frederick Cope, faculty manager of athletics at the high school, acting toastmaster.

The speaker had woven into his talk numerous jokes and humorous puns on football, connected to local and college activities. "Seriously though," he said, "the road to success in football lies in enthusiasm, backed by daring and stamina and the possession of playing intelligence."

Football a Fighting Game "You've got to fight," he said, "in this game of football, for something besides yourself." The coach cited examples of courage in football games where he was the supervisor. "A good bit of the difference in individuals," he commented, "lies in one's own confidence."

The Western Reserve mentor who has 21 years of coaching experience behind him, discussing the new rules setup for football, expressed the idea that the changes will give more opportunity for offensive play than heretofore.

Sidinger Praised Willaman termed Wayne Sidinger, Salem High school star of last season and now a freshman at Reserve, an excellent defensive tackle, with a chance to be "one of our better players next year."

Twenty-eight varsity letters were awarded to members of the Quaker football eleven at the banquet, the largest group to receive recognition in many years. Six Reserve letters also were awarded to players. Coach Lewis Smith made the presentations.

Kerr, Springer Talk Talks also were given by Superintendent E. S. Kerr, Principal Wilbur J. Springer and Mr. Gibson. Superintendent Kerr paid tribute to team members, especially those who sacrificed glory for the team's success in the past season, mentioning in particular Paul Williamson, quarterback and Alfred Rich.

James Peiler, William Guappone, Dick Wiggers, Harry McCarthy, Tom Bennett, Charles Berg, Joe Chlonsky, Robert Hertz, Howard Chubb, Lester Julian, Walter Haner, John Rich, Matt Liebhart, and Joe Herbert, varsity manager.

Minor Awards Bob Battin, Charles Yaeger, Ralph Walker, Vance Stewart, Bill DeRienzo, Dick McArthur and Managers Tom Tiley M. Oana and Dick Mullins.

Numerals R. Moffett, H. Kerr, G. Gibson, H. Hippley, W. Shepard, H. Smith, W. Wentz, R. Minamyer, D. Krauss, A. Abblett, V. Caulfield, M. Hudson, C. Raymond, J. Shea, J. Burke.

Ohio Basketball In Brief

(By Associated Press) Three college games kept basketball alive in Ohio last night and Wittenberg made a trip over to Elkins, W. Va., to take a 52 to 31 whipping from Davis & Elkins.

Wittenberg's greatest trouble seemed to be in finding some way to curb the enthusiasm of one "Chub" Watson, a Davis & Elkins performer who flipped in nine field goals and a free throw for 19 points.

Bluffton Takes Opener Bluffton college opened the home season impressively with a 50 to 31 victory over Giffin Junior college.

Defiance college carried its winning streak to three straight by defeating Adrian (Mich.) college, 45 to 43. Defiance trailed through the first half, but after a refreshing intermission, came back and took charge of the game. Williams and Woods, Defiance forwards, made the field goals apiece.

In the only other college game of the night, in Ohio, Muskingum defeated Franklin, 35 to 21 at New Concord.

MISS VAN WIE WINS WOMEN'S SPORTS AWARD

Newspaper Men Select Outstanding Feminine Star of 1934

(By Associated Press) Associated Press Sports Editor NEW YORK, Dec. 20. — To Virginia Van Wie, 25-year-old girl who captured the United States Women's golf championship this year for the third successive time goes the distinction of being rated for the outstanding feminine sports star of 1934.

First woman golfer to win this honor in the four-year history of the Associated Press sports poll, Miss Van Wie gained the No. 1 ranking position, in competition with rivals in all women's sports, by vote of the country's sports editors and writers.

Given Good Margin Although the poll disclosed a wide range of opinion, Miss Van Wie finished with a substantial margin over her three closest rivals, Helen Jacobs, three-time national tennis champion, Lenore Knight and Katherine Rawls, famous swimmers, who were ranked in that order by the voting fraternity of experts.

Miss Van Wie was put at the head of the list by 37 out of 102 observers and accumulated a total of 177 points, figured on the basis of all placings. Miss Jacobs, winner of the 1933 Associated Press poll, trailed Miss Knight in first-place nominations, 16 to 19, but won second position on points with a total of 131 to Miss Knight's 89.

Miss Rawls, the little Florida girl who holds all-around swimming honors, obtained 11 first-place votes and 72 points.

Didrikson Honored Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, the Texas girl who was a 1932 Olympic sensation and won the No. 1 ranking position in that year's poll, finished fifth, with 20 points, one more than Stella Walsh, Cleveland, Polish girl and Olympic sprinting champion. Miss Didrikson, although not so conspicuous since she turned professional, attracted attention this year because of her latest demonstration of versatility by scoring a 77 in golf tournament.

King Remains As Bearcats' Coach (By Associated Press) CINCINNATI, Dec. 20. — The "down town coaches" have lost their attempt to "get" Dana King, grid mentor of the University of Cincinnati.

King will remain as head football coach and as athletic director of the school, four members of the board of trustees announced.

The word was viewed generally as a definite move on the part of university authorities to halt the flood of rumors that King would be ousted from one or both positions.

Racing Notes (By Associated Press) NEW YORK, Dec. 20. — The older Handicap horse was the "forgotten thoroughbred" during the 1934 racing season, but announcement of increasing stakes for Handicap races, particularly in New York state, gives promise that the 1935 race season will see lively competition in this division.

The Belair Stud's Faireno, which was entered in most major stakes for older horses this year, was able to garner only $27,160 to lead the money-winners among the horses four years old and over. Gallant Sir, winner of the Agua Caliente Handicap, was second with $23,450. Dark Secret, before he broke down and was destroyed after winning the Jockey club gold cup, won $19,505. Indian Runner won $16,185 and Clarify $15,115.

The mighty Equipole, which started only a few times during the year, won approximately $15,000. W. C. Reichert's My Dandy, one of the true veterans of the turf, as he is nine years old and running almost entirely on nerve, proved he still is a Handicap calibre by winning $11,590 to bring his life's total winnings to approximately $150,000.

The low values of Handicap stakes in recent years have been a factor in the retirement of many leading thoroughbreds to the stud after their three-year-old campaigns. The boosts in stakes announced for next year are expected to induce owners to continue racing their stars.

1934 Season Features Record-Breaking Performances (By International News Service) NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Record-breaking performance by Bill Bonthron, Princeton distance runner; Glenn Cunningham of the University of Kansas, his persistent rival; Ben Eastman, of Stanford University; and Jack Torrance, Louisiana State university shot put star, featured the track and field season of 1934.

Bonthron, who beat Cunningham in three of five tinging duels, set a world record of 3:48.8 for 1,500 meters in the national A. A. U. outdoor championships at Milwaukee. In addition, he equalled Cunningham's mark of 3:52.2 for the indoor 1,500 meters.

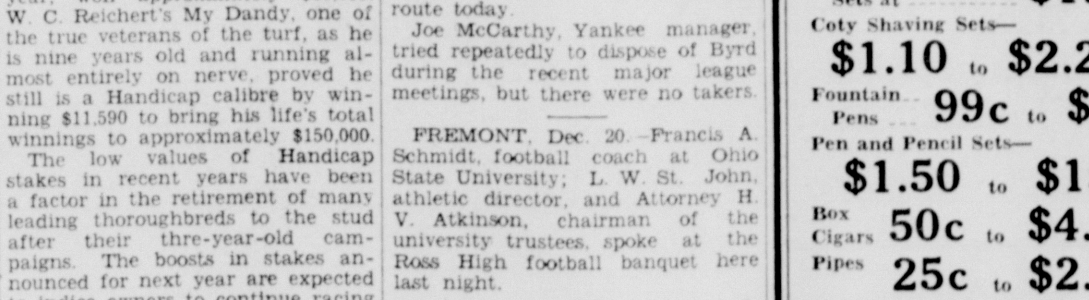

Set World Record Cunningham also set two other marks, a world record of 4 minutes 6.7 seconds for the outdoor mile and an American record of 4 minutes 8.4 seconds for the indoor mile. In setting the outdoor mile mark, he beat Bonthron by 40 yards.

Eastman set a world record of 1 minute 49.8-10 seconds for 800 meters at Princeton on June 16 and went on to crack the 800 yard mark.

Torrance kept shattering the shot put mark and finally raised the world record to 57 feet 1.7-32 in.

Keith Brown, Yale, set an indoor pole vault American record of 14 ft. 4 in. Walter Marty, Fresno State college, pushed the American running high jump mark, indoor, up to 6 ft. 8.3-4 in., and the outdoor record up to 6 ft. 9.1-8 in. The New York A. C. retained its

Open Season On Grid Coaches Leaves Good Positions Wide Open

Already "At Leisure" Are Hanley, Capt. Biff Jones, Eddie Casey, Bill Ingram, Carideo, Major Bob Neyland, McGugin and "Doc" Erskine

By Herbert W. Barker, Associated Press Sports Writer
NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Somebody's going to get up an all-American team of unemployed football coaches if the firing doesn't stop soon. Already "at leisure" for one reason or another are such nationally known teachers of the game as Dick Hanley of Northwestern, Captain Lawrence (Biff) Jones of Louisiana State, Eddie Casey of Harvard, Bill Ingram of California, Frank Carideo of Missouri, Major Bob Neyland of Tennessee and Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt. The "squad" may be much larger by the time the coaches gather for their annual convalesce after Christmas.

McGugin dropped the coaching reins he held at Vanderbilt for 29 years in order to become director of athletics. It took a war department order to get Neyland out of Knoxville. But the others all have resigned after persistent sniping by alumni or other sources.

Ingram was subjected to considerable criticism before he quit at California and abandoned his coaching career to enter business. His place at Berkeley has been taken by Leonard (Stub) Allison. The other vacancies, however, still are wide open.

The situation at Louisiana State, perhaps, is most interesting. Jones was a highly successful coach at West Point before he traveled south. His Louisiana State teams dropped only two conference games in three years but Jones resigned after tangle, verbally, with Huey Long to whom L. S. U. is "my university."

Shaughnessy Mentioned
At the moment, Clark Shaughnessy of Chicago is mentioned prominently for the job but John F. (Chick) Meehan, of Manhattan college, whose New York University teams of a few years back were nationally famous, also is under consideration.

Vanderbilt definitely is trying to lure Ray Morrison away from Southern Methodist but the others still are undecided.

Although Jones has been mentioned as a possible successor to Major Neyland at Tennessee, it seems more probable that Major Bill Britton, Neyland's assistant, will be stepped up a notch.

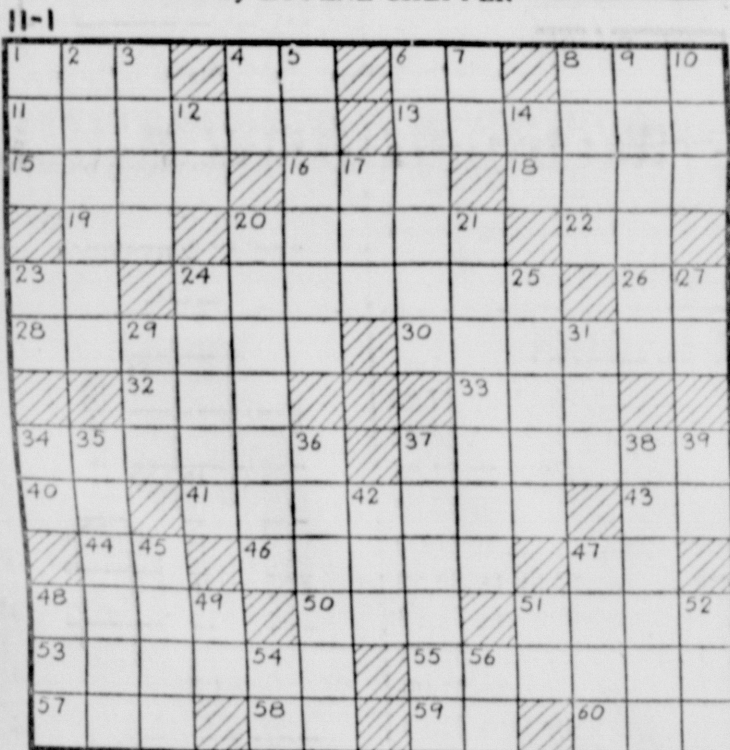

Wants Carideo's Job
Don Paurol, whose Kirkaville (Mo.) Teachers college teams have compiled an amazing record in the last few years, apparently has the inside track for Carideo's job at Missouri. Northwestern, reports say, would like to get Ossie Boien from Iowa. William J. Bingham has been given the task of finding a coach for Harvard and has done much traveling in the mid-west and the east in quest of Casey's successor.

The latest head to fall was Robert (Doc) Erskine of Loyola of the south. Erskine succeeded Shaughnessy at the New Orleans school. His resignation yesterday was accepted "with regret" but the fact remains that there was considerable alumni muttering over Loyola's comparative unsuccessful campaign this year.

Every "far advanced" case of tuberculosis was an "early case" once. Early discovery means early recovery. Christmas Seals funds help find the early case.

OF NO. CAROLINA—ONE OF 1934'S GREATEST GUARDS

Tips On Basketball

By Leon W. Schloss, Former Penn State Coach

By LEON W. SHELLO
International News Service
Sports Writer

This is the sixth article of a continuous series.

Let's clean up the shooting angle this time. In addition to the two broad classifications we have mulled over, namely, shooting "from out" and from "in under," we must give some consideration to certain hybrid shots which at times will play an important role in your offensive game.

I mean to say that many players have perfected for their own use some special toss—some peculiar flip from an unusual angle—an ace in the hole, to so speak.

I'll tell you about mine—rather the one I am using now, after much experimentation. Then you can snoop around on some rainy afternoon and work out one for yourself. A "pet" shot is a handy thing to have, in that it usually is an illogical affair that your opponent is not looking for, can't guard against successfully for some time after you first acquaint him with it.

I take the ball on the left hand side (as I face the basket) about 20 feet out, and dribble fast along an imaginary diagonal line drawn from that point into the diametrically opposite corner of the court. That is, diagonally across the foul line. I let fly any time after I pass the foul line—anytime the moment seems most propitious. My ball is always to the basket and usually to my guard, so the flip is almost always unstoppable. Of course, it is just as frequently unmakeable, if you'll permit me to coin a word. At least that's what a critic might say.

True, to a certain extent, but not nearly so unmakeable as one might suppose. In adopting this shot, I practiced for 20 minutes daily for two reasons in throwing the ball backwards over my head at a certain spot which I marked on the banking board, and which, if I succeeded in striking, deflected the ball directly into the basket.

A feature of this flip is the element of surprise. Most guards will be unaware of your purpose until the trick has been turned. Even after the first time, the guard will be tempted to keep "hands off," figuring your chances of connecting are nil, while he may be caught in a foul if he closes in.

Above all things, however, practice your ace, and have only one. Remember that no matter how assiduously you practice a freak, off-balance shot—and all freak shots are off-balance shots—the odds against your connecting for better than a 400 percentage are long. And consider this before you take off preparatory to letting loose the freak—that if you miss, your team play has for the moment been demoralized, and only the most drastic emergencies justify taking liberties with your team's cohesive passing efforts.

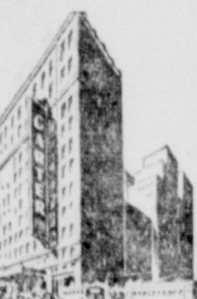

A "cray" shooter—REGARDLESS OF THE PERCENTAGE OF SHOTS HE MAKES SUCCESSFULLY—is a detriment to any, even the best, basketball team. Because the player that is constantly shooting at the basket from all angles aborts any beginning of successful team play.

In hasty conclusion, only a word about foul tossing. A word will suffice. Toss fouls in the fashion most natural and comfortable to yourself. I have seen coaches who coached foul tossing arbitrarily, that is, every one had to shoot underhand or overhead, or hold the left foot front, or the right, etc.

I can't see the logic in such practice. After all, tossing fouls is a matter of eye and judgment, coupled with muscular coordination. So just take aim, and throw it in. There's no one to bother you or jostle you. If you can toss 'em in one-handed, go to it.

Try the classifieds—a gold mine of value.

Tom Brown, Star of College Story, Here Friday; Arlen, Lupino Tonight

"BACHELOR of Arts," described as a fast moving, witty and honest story of college life—"a college picture without a football game," begins its engagement at the State theater Friday.

Story By Erskine

America's foremost satirical humorist, John Erskine, author of "The Private Life of Helen of Troy" among other notable books, wrote the novel from which the picture is taken. Erskine knows college life intimately, being a professor at Columbia university, and his greatest pleasure in writing is his stories concerning the boys and girls that make up the college world.

Tom Brown and Anita Louise have the main roles in the film and the supporting cast is headed by Arlene Judge, Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Stepin Fetchit and George Meeker. An interesting note concerning this cast is that it brings Miss Marsh and Walthall, the two principals of the silent screen's first success "The Birth of a Nation" together in the same picture for the first time since that famous film 20 years ago. The picture is interesting in that it presents a college tale that hasn't the usual "rah-rah" and last minute touchdown. However, it's a fast paced timely picture with plenty of comedy—Stepin all decked out in a white turtle necked sweater sees to that.

TONIGHT the State shows "Ready For Love" an entertaining film that co-stars Richard Arlen and Ida Lupino. Others in the cast are Marjorie Rambeau, Trent Durkin, Beulah Bondi, Henry Travers and Esther Howard.

Adding to his reputation of having played practically every type of character there is on the screen, Arlen is seen as editor of a small town paper. Miss Lupino's mother sends her to the village to keep her out of the mischief she is always getting into. Here she is mistaken for the sweetheart of the town's wealthiest citizen, who had just died. Arlen runs a front page story concerning the questionable reputation of the young lady and the town folks' gossip combines with the paper in ruining the girl's reputation. When Arlen realizes his mistake he prints a retraction but it is too late.

In the meantime he has fallen in love with the girl from the city and when the wives of the village roughhouse the girl, even ducking her into the river, he sends a story throughout the country concerning the incident. But he hasn't realized the publicity would make Ida famous and when she is offered a stage contract she accepts, forgetting the editor who has tried so hard to remedy his first story.

The incidents that bring about a conclusion to the story are amusing and interesting.

HER WISH NOW A REALITY

For Years Women Have Wished
For a Refrigerator Like the

New Air Conditioned
Coolerator!"

ECONOMICAL REFRIGERATION FOR YEARS TO COME!

A Lifetime Christmas Gift

ANY WOMAN WOULD BE PROUD TO OWN!

SMALL DOWN PAYMENT!

No More Payments Until April 1, 1935

SO NEW—

so startlingly different is Coolerator from any refrigerator you have ever known, that it changes all your ideas of dependable, economical home refrigeration.

Ice cubes in five minutes! No mingling of food odors! No more need to cover dishes! No more drying out of foods! All in a refrigerator that costs only 1-2 to 1-3 of what you'd expect to pay—a refrigerator that 65,500 women already herald as the greatest new advance in the whole field of refrigeration.

Coolerator differs from all other refrigerators because of its patented air conditioning chamber, which washes and humidifies the air and passes it through the food chamber several times each minute. This moist air does not rob food of its own moisture and flavor, but does absorb and carry away food odors.

Coolerator uses ice for its refrigerant, but in a different way than it has ever been used before. For example: one icing lasts from 4 to 7 days. Another: ice melts flat—from bottom of cake. Maintains steady temperature at all times.

"BEACH BEAUTY" by ARTHUR SHUMWAY

CHAPTER XXIV

Something about the man on the lawn was familiar. Kay was not sure what it was; his gait probably, the outline of his figure, for she had had no clear glimpse of his face and could have told nothing about his clothes.

She stood there by the door, peering out, but she no longer saw the man. He was looking into the lighted living room, she supposed. Thinking quickly, she realized that he could not get into the house without making noise enough for her to hear. There were screens on every window and both the front and back doors, as well as the sun-porch door, were locked.

She could slip to the telephone and call the police as quietly as possible. She hesitated a moment, then abandoned the idea; there were two reasons: the man might hear her and make trouble or at least escape, and Harrow had not intended to call in the police yet. She realized that instinctively she had associated this prowler with the men sent to "get" Harrow through her. In that case, Harrow should know.

The best thing, then, would be to warn Harrow at once and in such a way that the man might not be alarmed; might be captured so as to help clear up the mystery. There was only one thing to do.

Kay drew a deep breath and walked boldly into the lighted living room, expecting any second to hear the screen crash, or to hear a shot or a command to halt. There was no sound, though, save for the ticking of the clock and the rattling of the palm fronds in the growing breeze outside the house.

She walked casually to a chair, picked up a magazine which lay on it, face down, looked at it critically, shut it, put it on the table, then turned to a book shelf and scanned the titles. Selecting a book—she had no idea which one—she yawned quite candidly and looked up at the clock as if debating the question of going to bed. She walked to the hall, snapped on the stair light, then turned and switched off the light in the living room, the book under her arm, and started slowly upstairs.

She went into her room and turned the top light on there, stood near the window and started to pull off her dress. That should be convincing enough to anyone outside who wondered if she planned to retire. As with sudden realization, she snatched the window shade and pulled it down; then, back away from the window, she put the dress on.

Kay stole out into the hall and back downstairs, stopping every few steps to listen carefully. If the man still hung about the house he certainly was being quiet; he knew his business only too well.

Crouching and avoiding the moonlight that came into the house, she tiptoed back to the kitchen and looked out. The yard was brightly clear in the moonlight and there was no motion, no disturbing shadow anywhere. Bit by bit, she turned the key in the lock until the door was open. With her ear to the slight crack, she listened carefully. All she heard was her friend, the lugubrious whippoorwill, and the wind in the palms, and the rumble of the wooden bridge that indicated an automobile was crossing the river down at the corner.

Kay opened the door farther and farther until she was able to slip out; then again she turned the lock slowly, carefully, her ears straining to catch any sudden sound that would send her flying back into the house. At last, though, the door was locked and she was stealing away.

Her bicycle stood at the back porch. She reached it and took it by the handlebars, pushing it slowly across the lawn until she was behind a dense growth of bamboo. Again she stopped to listen and to look back. She saw nothing suspicious, but that did not mean definitely that she was out of danger or that the prowler had gone. Naturally, her plan having worked, she would be on the lighted side of the house, watching her bedroom, or trying to climb the porch and enter it.

She pushed her bicycle around the shrubbery, across the lawn, through the little gap in the hedge and into the next yard. Then mounting it, she pedaled rapidly down the winding drive and out upon the sidewalk of Halifax avenue. Under the foliage from the arching branches of trees and the oleanders that grew along the street parkage, she could speed away with little danger of being seen.

It occurred to her only then as she raced along the sidewalk toward the bridge that she might have been foolish in leaving Dave and Harry, the roomers, and the cook, at the mercy of the prowler. What if one of the men were to return home just as the stranger entered the house? Certainly there would be trouble and there was a good chance that the innocent roomer would be the victim. This thought made her pedal even harder to get across the bridge and warn Earl Harrow before anything happened.

She rode on southward, an interminable sprint, it seemed, and each time a car came from behind her she pulled aside and crouched back among the shrubbery on the lawn, until it had disappeared. At last she came to the south bridge. There she turned west and made the final exhausting dash across the river. From the peninsula shore she could see that there were still many lights burning on the Commander III.

At the dock she threw the wheel aside and ran aboard the boat. One of the "muggs" appeared from somewhere and blocked her way. But he recognized her, she, him, "I have to see Mr. Harrow", she panted.

The man stepped aside without so much as a grunt.

Harrow appeared in blue dressing gown and pajamas, a pipe in his mouth.

"Kay!" he said. "What's the matter?"

She told him. He listened gravely, nodding, without once interrupting here. When she had finished he patted her on the shoulder and said, "You've certainly used your head."

"He may still be there," Kay said, still a bit breathless.

"He may," Harrow agreed coolly. "And we're going over to have a look."

He stepped down the deck. A man rose. Kay recognized him as the one who had halted her when she came aboard. He and Harrow talked a moment, then Harrow returned.

"Excuse me, please," he said. "I'm going to throw on some clothes."

He was dressed in a hurry and when he appeared Spike was with him, sleepy and vague. Kay had to smile when she saw Spike. He had on lavender pajama trousers and a yellow pullover. But under the pullover was the bulge of his shoulder holster carrying that .38 automatic.

"I'd better go, too," Kay began, but Harrow cut her short.

"Not at all! Wouldn't think of it."

"But you're not familiar with the place. And how would the men in the house know you from prowlers yourselves if they were to wake up?"

"Better let her," Spike suggested. Harrow's eyes snapped at him.

"I insist," Kay said, and that was that.

The party got into the big car, Harrow driving, Kay at his side. Spike and the two bodyguards in the rear seat. The fast car shot across the bridge, swung with a vicious pull and straining of tires, and headed north on Halifax at top speed. Near the house Harrow slowed the car down.

"We'll get out here," he said.

They all got out quietly, and Harrow switched off the lights. They walked toward the house. At the yard Harrow ordered:

"You circle to the south."

One of the men nodded, started. To the other: "You go around the other way."

The man mumbled something and was gone.

"I'm going up the drive," Harrow announced. "Spike, you tag along with Kay. Keep her out of danger. Do you understand?"

"Yes, sir," Spike said soberly.

Harrow turned and started up the driveway. Kay felt a violent urge to seize him and hold him back, but he was on his way.

"Come on, now," Spike said. "We'll just slip along through the bushes. If either of the men in the house come popping out, you yell and tell them who we are."

They slipped behind the hibiscus at the entrance to the drive, and keeping back of the plants that bordered it worked their way slowly, cautiously toward the house. Spike checked Kay finally by touching her arm. He winked at her solemnly, drew his automatic and made a little motion with his thumb at the side of the pistol. Kay knew what that meant; he was slipping off the safety catch so as to be ready to fire.

They stood waiting for what seemed an hour. Suddenly there was the sound of footfalls nearby. Up came Spike's arm and the blue-black barrel of the gun gleamed in the moonlight. Kay's nerves flinched at the expected explosion.

But the man was Earl Harrow. He and Spike recognized each other fortunately, at the same time.

"Well, Earl?"

"No luck. Haven't seen a soul."

"What'll we do?"

"I'm going to leave one of the boys here. I'll post him in the bushes near your bedroom window, Kay. You're coming back to the boat with us, and when we get to a phone you're going to call your house and raise one of those men. Tell him where you are, what's happened and that there's a man watching outside. Tell him to go back to bed and not to pay attention to anything that may happen. Tell him to sneak into your room and switch off the light so that anybody watching would think you'd finally gone to sleep."

"All right," Kay said.

"Let's go, then," concluded Harrow, crisply. Kay admired his coolness, his competence.

Kay was a long time falling asleep that night on the yacht. Still excited by the affair of the prowler still worried as to its consequences, and considerably aware of the strangeness about her on the boat she lay trying to think through the situation, but it was no use. Nothing was solved, nothing was even halfway clear, to her, maybe nothing ever would be.

Only one thing was certain and that one thing was what disturbed her the most: there had been something familiar about the man skulking in the yard. She thought of the men whose affairs were now involved with hers. There was Harrow, but surely he could not have left his car and come sneaking up into the bushes so quickly. Furthermore, why should he have done anything of the sort? Well, then, there was Spike. Spike and Harrow had quarreled over her, that was true. Spike knew all Harrow's business, Spike for all his understanding, friendship, had a frank and strong desire for her. But that frankness alone was enough to weigh against the possibility of his having been prowling in her yard.

There were the "muggs," Kelly and Wagner hired to guard Earl Harrow. And again, why should either of them have been sneaking around her house? As for the men, whoever they were, who were plotting against Harrow, she was sure she never had seen them. Why, then, could it have been? And why had he been there?

In the morning when the sun came streaming in upon her, Kay could not imagine for a moment where she was. The sight of the yacht club across the glistening water seemed decidedly out of place and the bed felt strange. Gradually she began to review the events that had brought her here, and now in the bright morning sun in such clean and beautiful surroundings the whole business seemed to be a bad dream. But her mere presence on the boat denied that.

Lying lazily in the soft bed, she suddenly realized that the mystery of the prowler might have been settled during the night. She jumped up, had a shower and began to dress rapidly.

Harrow was on deck with Captain Johnson. When he saw her the producer excused himself and hurried her.

"Sleep well?" he asked cheerfully.

"Perfectly—after I finally got over the excitement. But, did anything happen? Did they catch him?"

Harrow shook his head.

"Sorry to say. He didn't come back. Wagner checked in this morning looking like a cucumber, after his night in the bushes with the mosquitoes."

"Then we're no better off than we were?" Kay said. "You've no idea, I mean, who it was?"

"Not exactly; no. But I expected it. And the best part of it is that nothing happened. Kay, I'm awfully sorry about this silly business. I dragged you into it. But I wouldn't have for the world. It's something utterly unexpected here in Daytona, that is—and it seems a shame just when there were so many pleasant things to do. It's cutting into my schedule, too."

"You have been delayed here."

"Yes, and I may a few days longer. But then—and he raised his shoulders slightly and smiled—"it'll all come out in the wash."

"I hope so."

"You do, eh?"

"I do really," she observed simply.

"You're a nice person, Kay. Owen I'll admit I can't understand you altogether, but you're a nice sort of guy."

"Thank you," she said. "You're pretty nice yourself, you know. I'm sorry if you can't understand me, as you say. I'm not so complex, really. I'm a very simple soul. I'm afraid."
